

Kevin Doherty is a retired civil servant with a 42-year public service career that included roles in Information Technology, Personnel Management and Policy Development, working variously in the Department of the Environment, Cabinet Office and the Department for Education, where he also served as Private Secretary to the Minister of State. As a life-long Classicist, his historical interests, though wide-ranging, tend towards the ancient world and his Masters Degree in Classical Studies (awarded in 2018) concentrated on Greco-Roman mythology and its interpretation in early twentieth-century imagist poetry. Sussex born and bred, he has been a Battle resident since 2014 although he is tied to the town by his wife's far deeper connections.

Kevin is a member of the Classical Association and the Hellenic Society (as well as a member at Plumpton Racecourse) and is a Governor at Battle and Langton CE Primary School.
